ORLIE

This matter was called for a jury trial before the Court on August 22, 2005. On motion of the Defendants, the jury demand was withdrawn and the case proceeded to a nonjury trial. Over a three-day period, the Court received testimony of witnesses and documents into evidence in the course of an ore seems hearing. The parties also had an opportunity to submit post-trial briefs. In apportunity to submit post-trial briefs. In apportunity to makes the following fluttings of that and constusions of law:

Procedural Hackground

The Plaintiffs are Harris Leveson and Harris Pest & Termite Control. Plaintiffs' complaint asserted several claims against Definidents Peoples Community Bank (hereins the "the Bank"), Larry Pitchford and Jerry Galledge. These claims are negligance, wantonness, fraud, suppression, deceit, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duties, conversion, negligent and/or wanton histor, retainion and supervision, outrage and violation of duties as a notary public. Plaintiffs seek compensately damages and punitive damages.

Defendants denied Plaintiffs' allegations. Defendants contended that the Plaintiffs have not been damaged by their alleged wrongful conduct. Defendants contended that Plaintiffs have conjured up damages which were proved primarily by salf-serving testimony. Defendants further contended that Plaintiffe did not present sufficient evidence to support an award of punitive damages.

The Court heard testimony from nine witnesses. Plaintiffs called as witnesses Christine Jernigan, Letechia Jackson, Joe Puecio, Cara Huno, Ray Weeks and Tamara Grubbs Newton. Defendants called Larry Pholifierd and Harris Leveson as witnesses. Plaintiffs then called Jerry Gulledge as a rebuttal witness.

Plaintiffs also offered into evidence the depositions of Lies Bell, Merri Brogden, Sharon Giddens, Defendant Jerry Guiledge, Macy Holley, Christine Jernigen, Plaintiff Harris Leveson, Michelle Patterson, Defendant Larry Filchtord, Kevin Potthoff, Sandy Suwart, Rickey Stuckey and Ricky Thursby.

The Court considered more than 150 exhibits introduced into evidence by the parties in support of their positions. The Court also received into evidence audicianes of conversations and written renectipts from those tapes of conversations involving Potthoff, Leveson, Jernigen, Gulledge and Pitchford.

Findings of Fact

The findings of fact set forth below are based on the entire record, including the observations by the Court of the demennor of the witnesses, briefs, exhibits, depositions and other relevant evidence adduced at the trial.

Harris Leveson is the sole owner of Harris Pest & Termite Control, whose office is issued on Broad Street in Buffauls.

Cinistine Jennigan is a bookkeeper with works part-time for Harris Post & Termite Control. Jernigan was authorized by Harris Leveson to handle his finances.

Peoples Community Bank has branches in Alabama, Florida and Georgia. The Bank has six branches in the State of Alabama, one of which is in Eufaula.

Rickey Stuckey is the Bank's Chief Executive Officer. His office is in Colquitt, Georgia.

Defendant Larry Pitchford is the Bank's President for the State of Alabama. He supervises the branch managers of all six branches in the state. He is also on the Bank's loan committee.

In late 2002, Larry Pitchford met with Joe Puecie, who had worked with Kevin Potthoff at Harbour County Bank. Fitchford expressed at interest in hiring Kevin Potthoff. Puecio told Larry Pitchford that if Potthoff was going to work in a lending capacity that he 10/20/05 13:37 FAX 770 849 0400 would have to be closely supervised. Pictatud and Rickey Stuckey bired Kavin Potthoff to be the Batik's manager of the branch in Enfants on October 29, 2002. As branch manager, Potthoff was actively involved in lending. Potthoff was an "at will" employee of the Bank. The Bank has a probationary period for six months after him. Potthoff was the Bank's manager until he was terminated on November 3, 2003.

Defendant Jerry Gulledge was hired by the Bank's President Larry Pitchford in June 2003. Gulledge had no previous banking separtence. Kavin Potthoff was Gulledge's supervisor. After Potthoff was terminated, Gulledge was promoted to branch manager. Gulledge left the Bank in August 2004.

Sharon Giddens was a consumer lender in the Enfants branch for the Bank. She was supervised by Kevin Porthoff and then by Jarry Guiledge.

Lies Bell was amployed by the Bank in Eufaula. She also was a notary public. Bell became a notary in the Summer of 2003. She was supervised by Kevin Potthoff and then by Jerry Gulledge.

Harris Leveson had banked with Kevin Potthoff at Barbour County Bank, which ister became MidSouth Bank. After Potthoff became employed by the Bank, he tried to convince Leveson to move his ican and accounts there. Leveson opened a business checking account and established a line of cradit at the Bank in December 2002.

Porthoff was discovered check kiting on November 22, 2002, one month after he was bired as branch manager. Even though the Bank's Personnel Policy allowed it to summarily dismiss Porthoff for check kiting, the Bank chose to give him a chance.

One month later, in December 2002, Potthoff began writing cashier's checks to his wife in order to quickly obtain funds. This was in violation of the Bank's policies and procedures. However, the Bank continued to apply Pothoff even after notice that he was writing cashier's checks to his wife and delaying the payment on those cashier's checks.

In January 2003, a loan processor at the Bank reported that Potthoff was issuing loans which had terms different from the terms approved by the Bank's loan committee. This was in violation of the Bank's policies and procedures. However, the Bank continued to employ Potthoff even after notice of these problems.

In Jamuary 2003, Marris Loveson obtained a $41,000 line of credit from the Bank to take care of cash flow issues in his business. Plaintiffs had an understanding with Potthoff that Leveron or Jernigan would notify him whenever they needed money moved from the line of credit into the company's checking account.

The Bank had a policy which permitted the waiver of non-sufficient fund ("NSF") fees for overdrawn quetomers. In February 2003, Potthoff paid NSP fees of a customer by depositing bank finide into that customer's account.

In April 2003, Porthoff lesued more captur's checks in his wife's name and wrote an unspoured loan allegedly for his housekeeper in violation of the Bank's policies and prosecures.

By May 2003, Potthoff had been overdiawn on his personal account at the Bank 19 times since January 2003. This was in violation of the Bank's policies and procedures. However, the Bank continued to employ Pottholl even after notice of his personal overdrafts. Potthoff also continued to write carbier's checks to his wife and delay payment on those checks. During one week, Postnoff had issued $12,000 in cashier's checks. Rickey Stockey and Larry Pitchford met with Potthoff regarding these violations but decided to retain Potthoff as the branch manager.

Porthoff also opened up an account in his wife's name from which he constantly cycled monies even though he was not on the account's signature card. The Bank continued to employ Potthoff after notice of these impropriaties.

By the summer of 2003, Bank loan processors confinied to note misrepresentations by Potthoff regarding loans, including discrepancies regarding interest rates and collateral. However, the Bank continued to employ Potkoff as a branch manager even after notice of there discrepandice.

In August 2003, Larry Pinchford became aware that Kevin Potthoff, with Bank funds, had paid NSF fees for Harris Leveson at Southland Bank. Pitchford determined that Potthoff's action would be excused since the Bank had charged Leveson a 1% loan for Instead of its usual 14%.

During this time Potthoff continued to solicit Leveson's banking business. While Leveson had a line of credit and checking assount at the Bank, he also had a mortgage at MidSouth Bank for approximately $200,000. The term of the mortgage was for 30 years at 6.24% interest. The mortgage was secured by two parcels of land as collateral.

Politicall represented to Leveson that an investment group from Texas had put up money for the Bank's use, and that Leveson could obtain a loan at the Bank with a 3.99% interest rate. Porthoff proposed that Leveson take out a new loss with the Bank to pay off his existing mortgage at MidSouth Bank and the $41,000 line of credit at the Bank. Porthoff also proposed a new line of credit for business operating expenses. The collected for this new loss was to be the same collected as on the WidSouth Bank mortgage, which was two parcels of land.

Leveson and Potthoff agreed to the terms fit two new loans. The interest rate for the $240,000 loan was at a 3.99% fixed rate for 15 years with no balloon and no acceleration clause. The monthly payment would be approximately $1,700 a month. The line of credit would be for $15,000, but it would be increased to $25,000 shortly after the initial closing.

There were problems with scheduling of the loan closing. The closing ran six to eight weeks late. On September 2, 2003, Christine Jemigen and Harris Leveton ettended the closing at the Bank which started shortly before lunch. The closing was handled by Potthoff. Christine Jefflight read the lean documents, and Harris Leveton asked Kavin Potthoff numerous questions regarding the documentation.

When a loan is closed, the Bank requires the customer to initial every page and sign the appropriate signature page in the presence of a notary public. Leveson initialed each page of the two mortgages and signed the documents. However, there was no notary public in the room during the time that the documents were executed. The only person present other than Leveson and Jemigan was Kevin Potthod. The documents that Leveson signed on September 2, 2003, were consistent with the representations made to him by Kevin Potthod regarding the terms of the loans.

The Court finds that the loan documents which were presented as exhibits at the trial could not have been signed by Harris Leveson on the morning of September 2, 2003. The morning season of the documents were not even requested by the Bufaula branch until late that morning. The Bank's courier could not have delivered these documents in time for the closing. The Court finds that the loan documents which were initialed and signed by Harris Leveson were not produced by the Bank and were not presented at trial.

Leveson asked Potthoff for a copy of the closing documents. Potthoff told Leveson that he needed to come back after buch for a copy. The copies were not ready that afternoon as he had promised.

Shortly thereafter, Leveson signed documents to increase his line of credit from $15,000 to $25,000.

Potitioff did not provide Leveson with capies of the loss documents until almost 30 days after the closing. Leveson was nover provided with a copy of the settlement statement.

Leveson and larginga began to question whether Potthoff was "shooting straight" with them or whether they were getting the run around. Leveson complained to Cara Hutto, a tailer at the Bank, and Hutto reported this complaint and approximately ten others to her supervisor. The others that had complained to Hutto about Potthoff were discatisfied with the amounts of their loss payments and their interest rates.

Lateshia Jackson and her husband also dealt with Kevin Potthoff at the Bank. Potthoff handled their closing. The Jacksons did not get the mortgage Porthoff represented to them that they were getting. There was no notary present to acknowledge their signatures. She and her husband signed documents at the closing but did not receive copies of the documents at that time. When she did get a copy of the documents, it was not what she and her husband had signed.

Beginning September 29, 2003, Leveson and Jemigen started recording their conversations with Porthoff and other bank employees.

Once Leveson finally received copies of the purported lean papers, he noticed that the papers were incorrect. The lean documents which Leveson received from the Bank were not what he had signed at the lean closing in September. None of the pages were initialed. The collected was four parcels of land instead of two. The interest two for the large lean was shown to be at 5.5% instead of 3.99%. The monthly payments were $2.098 instead of $1,723. The lean documents specified a balloon payment and contained an acceleration clause.

The documents that Leveson received also indicated that a notary at the Bank, Lies Ball, signed the acknowledgments as having witnessed Leveson's signatures. However, Bell failed to keep a register book for her notarial acknowledgments, and she did not remember being present at the Leveson closing. She acknowledged that she did not know if Leveson signed the mortgage acknowledgments. She admitted that she could have notarized the documents without witnessing Leveson's execution of the documents.

When confronted by Leveson and Jernigan, Potthoff acknowledged that the documents were incorrect. He claimed that the documents could have been mixed up in the copying process. Potthoff told Leveson that the mortgage would be corrected, that he would have the 3.99% interest rate and that Leveson should pay the agreed-upon payment of about $1,700 per month. Potthoff also assured Leveson that his line of credit was for $25,000 and that the first year's payments on that lean would be interest only.

In October 2003, Potthoff, without authorization, withdrew monies from his wife's law firm's account and deposited them into his account. This was in violation of the Bank's polities and procedures. However, the Bank continued to employ Politics? as the breach manager even after notice of these withdrawnis.

Leverent and Jemigen believed that the line of credit had been increased to $25,000 and requested draws off the line of credit to go into the checking account. Posthoff confirmed that these draws and transfers had been successfully done. Potthoff gave deposit ally receipts to Leveson and Jernigan showing that these draws and transfers had been completed as they requested. Jernigen wrote obsoks from the account against these deposits.

However, Kevin Potthoff fulled to transfer monies from Plaintiffs' line of credit into the checking account. Checks written by Jernigen bounced due to the fact that these draws and transfers were never made. Plaintiffs were caused to incur enormous NSF fees simply because Pullhoff failed to transfer funds as promised and as represented.

Pottleriff agreed to reimburse Plaintiffs for the NSF fees because Plaintiffs incurred the fees as a result of his mistakes. Branch managers have the authority to agree to raimburse a customer for certain expenses or fees from the Bank's NSF account.

From April 2003 to September 2003, Kevin Potthoff wrote 28 different losus in excess of $5,000,000 on behalf of the Bank. He was the Bank's leading lander for the State of Alabama. At the time of his dismissel, Potthoff's loan portfolio was approximately $25,000,000.

On October 24, 2003, Polithoff presented Leveson with deposit slips of $2,150 and $3,500. The dollar payment represented reinflammement of the MSF fees which Porthoff had promised.

In late October of 2003, Harris Leveson signed a Loss Modification Agreement which modified the interest tate on the large lean to 3.99%. According to Larry Pitchford and unbeknownet to Pisintiffs, the Loan Modification was never presented to the loan committee for approval.

On October 29, 2003, Plaintiffs delivered to the Bank a check for $1,769.89 which represented his first loan payment.

Toward the end of October, Kevin Potthoff went on vacation. While Petthoff was out of the office it came to Pitchford's attention that money had been moved by Putthoff from other customers' accounts into Harris Leves ar's account. On Monday, November 3, 2003, Phohford confronted Potthoff about the transfers and terminated his employment with the Bank.

Hank employees were instructed not to tall any of the Hank's customers about Potthoff's termination for one week. After one week, they could say that Porthoff was no longer employed at the Bank.

Jerry Guiledge was promoted to branch manager after Potthoff's termination. After Potthoff's termination, Christine Jernigan and Harris Leveson went to see Sharon Giddens, Jerry Guiledge and Larry Pitchford at the Bank regarding the problems with their towns and accounts. Leveson and Jernigan told Giddens, Chilledge and Pitchford that they had not been given the right copies of the loan documentation by Kavin Potthoff. They also told them about the numerous promises and representations made by Kevin Potthoff.

The $1,769.89 check written by Plaintiffs for their first loan payment was not presented by the Bank for payment until November 14, 2003. The Bank noted on its records that the $1,769.89 payment was a "partial" payment.

On November 3, 2003, Leveson delivered another loss payment to the Bank. This was a cathier's check from Southland Bank for $2,426.85. Leveson delivered the payment for that amount because Gulledge had insisted that he do so.

Jorry Guilledge called Harris Leveson and told him that the $2,426.85 check for the second loan payment that was drawn on Southland Bank was no good. Leveson told Guilledge that the money was in his account at Southland Bank and that the check was good. The check eventually cleared.

On November 7, 2008, the Bank unitaterally withdraw monies from Plaintiffs' account without providing any notice to Hunts Leveson. Guiledge instructed Sharon Giddens to debit Leveson's secount $5,650. The Bank claimed that the deposit had been "made in error" by Kavin Potthoff on October 24, 2003.

The simply withdrawal of $5,650 from Plaintiffs' account left them with no money and in overdrawn status. This caused checks to bounce. Plaintiffs had a positive balance in the account when these monies were removed.

On November 12, 2003, Guiledge stat a letter to Harris Leveson claiming that Pisintiffs were late on their loss payments. Guiledge also threatened foreclosure on Leveson's house and property. Plaintiffs were not late on their loss payments.

Gulledge and Pitchford insisted that Leveson shide by what they knew to be clearly deficient loan documents in the Bank's file. Leveson and Jernigen were told that if they could not provide copies of what they claimed Kevin Potthoff promised them or what they claimed they had signed that the Bank wouldn't do anything about it.

According to Larry Pitchford, the Bank showed Plaintiffs' line of credit to be only $15,000 and not $25,000 as represented by Potthoff. Pitchford testified that the Loan Committee had been presented with a request for a $25,000 line of credit request, but that the Committee had approved Leveson for only $15,000. Guiledge told Leveson that until the Bank could find decuments showing a $25,000 line of credit, the Bank had to go with the ductionents that they had which was $15,000,

On December 29, 2003, Gulledge sent Leveson two certified mail letters. One letter edvised Leveson that his account had been averdrawn for 49 consecutive days and that the Bankhad closed his account. The Bank gave Leveson until Monday, January 5, 2004, to pay $6,784.57 in overdrafts or it would be turned over for collection. This overdraft resulted from the Bank's removal of funds from Plaintiffs' account in November. The second letter advised that his loan was past due and that he had until January 5, 2004, to bring the loan current. The letter also advised that another payment of $4,295.74 was also due on January 5, 2004.

Pitchford and Guiledge advised Leveson that he could pay off the overdraft amount by horrowing additional monies from the Bank. Jerry Guiledge presented to the Bank's Loan Committee a request for a $6,875.57 loan for Harris Leveson to repay NSF and eventuals fees at the Bank. The request noted that the charges and fees were caused "by a previous Enfants. lender." The loan request also noted that "existence still disputes charge." The Loan Committee approved the request but required colleteral valued at $330,000. After Leveson refused to go forward with the loss, the Bunk wrote off the NSF and overdraft fees. However, the Bank continued to threaten Levelon with economic sanctions even after it had decided to write off the overdraft amount.

In February 2004, Defendants Gullsdap and Pitchford threatened Leveson again by telling him that in addition to immediate foresionne, the Bank had the right to call the entire smount of Levesun's loans.

There is substantial evidence of damage to the Plaintiffs as a result of Defendants' conduct. Leveson was forced to go to various businesses in Enfants and pick up numerous bounced checks. Potthoff also went to various businesses and picked up bounced checks. The Bank charged $25 per NSF check. The payer's bank charged $30 per NSF check. Kavin Potthoff drafted a letter for Plaintiffs to distribute which explained that "bank error" caused the checks to bounce. However, businesses did not want the letter. The businesses just wanted their money.

Employees' paychecks bounced, including furse to Harris Laveson's secretary, Merri Brogden. Even though Kevin Potthoff spologized to her about the bounced checks, Mrs. Brogden was situid that Harris Leveson would "go under." When she and the other employees went to the Bank to cash their psychecks, Bank employees would eash them only if Kevin Potthoff were present and gave them his authorization.

Herause Plaintiffs' checks were returned the insufficient fluids, Plaintiffs' account was picked up by the CheckScan system utilized by a number of Eulania businesses, including IGA, Piggly Wiggly, Inland Oil, Liberty Oil, Big Cat, Winn-Dixio, Eufania Country Club and Video Warehouse. Businesses utilizing CheckScan refused to accept Plaintiffs' checks on numerous occasions, causing Harris Levesco to be inconvenienced and prestly embarrassed.

Businesses who received bad checks were conserned about the viability of Plaintiffs' business. People on the street asked Leveson about problems with his business. Between March and October 2003, Plaintiffs had 52 different checks from the Bank which were returned and 235 which were force paid. Most of the 32 bounded checks were presented for payment more than once. The Bank assessed Plaintiffs a $25 charge for each of the 287 checks which were issued with insufficient fands. In addition, for each of the bounced checks, all of the merchants except the Big Cat in Georgetown charged a $30 bounce fee; the Big Cat charged $25 for each of its two bounced checks. These fees alone total at least $9.725.

After the Probate Countreceived a bad check, the Barbour Country Countreceitsed to accept a check from Leveson. Leveson was not allowed to pay with a check at the Countrous until August of 2005.

Ray Weeks, owner of Big Cat in Georgetown, has known Harris Leveson for a number of years. In 2003, the Big Cat received two had checks from Leveson. These two had checks caused him concern about Leveson's business.

Tamaza Grubba Newton's employer, Brisula Farm Supply, also known as Rainbow Farm Supply, received two bad checks from Plaintiffs in August and September 2003. Mrs. Newton became concerned about Harris Leveson's business, especially since Leveson had never proviously given her employer a bad check.

Certified letters concerning had chacks scon poured in from collection agencies. Within ten days of receipt of these letters, Plaintiffs had to pay their indebtedness by cashier's check or money order. Because of these collection letters and because the Bank falsely reported to the credit buseau that Plaintiffs was past due on their loan, Plaintiffs' credit collapsed. VISA declined to issue Plaintiffs a credit card. American Express and GMAC canceled their pards. Plaintiffs' credit surre also suffered.

Harris Leveson never agreed that the Built could have as colleteral four parcels of land plus his home. Nonotheless, the Bank rescribed with the Barbour County Probate Court two mortgages, each having as collateral four purculs of land and Leveson's home. Plaintiffs later rought a loan from Southland Bank to provide operational money for the business, but were refused because Plaintiffs had no additional colleteral.

Plaintiffs felt an additional Ansnoial crusch after leaguing that their line of cratik at the Bank was $10,000 less than had been represented by Kevin Potthoff and the dominents which Leveson had signed. Plaintiffs were prevented from purchasing needed equipment for their business, including a spray rig and bucks: truck. When the line of credit matured, Leveson was forced to horsow the maney from his father's estate to pay off the indebtedness.

Merri Brogden worked out of her house w Plaintiffs' secretary. Leveson's fidencial situation became so stressful that Mrs. Brogden quit her job. As a result, Plaintiffa were forced to rent office space. Pisintiffs have paid $225 per month since October 2003 for rent that they would not have had to otherwise pay if she had not quit. The telephone at this office costs Plaintiffs an additional $110 per month. As of August 2005, Plaintiffs had incurred an additional $7,370 in office expenses that they would not have had to mour had Merri Brogden remained as Harris Leveson's secretary.

Added to the out-of-pocket losses was an enormous loss of time. Christine Jemigan has worked at least 20 to 25 hours each week since December 2002 in an attempt to straighten out the problems caused by the Bank's entors. Harris Leveson agreed to pay Mrs. Jamigan for her services once the Bank problems were resolved. Mrs. Jamigan cams $15 per hour for bookkeeping work.

Harris Leveson has spent approximately 350 hours trying to fix the problems caused by Kevin Potthoff and others at the Bank. Because Leveson often spent up to four hours a day at this endeaver, Marris Pest & Templic Control lost between 150 and 160 templic oustomers. The value of each of these customers over the five-year contract period ranges from $1,150 to $1,950. The loss of revenus from these lost customers ranges between $172,500 and $216,000.

Spending so much time trying to resolve Bask matters also caused Leveson to lear his work as a cotton scout. For 35 years, Harris Levison scouted sotton for several local cotton farmers. Prior to the Bank States, Leveson had maned between $55,000 and $65,000 each year at such work. Thus far, Leveson has just at jeest $165,000 due to his unavailability to work as a cotton scuut.

Defendants' wrongful conduct had a profound effect on Harris Leveson, not only financially but also smotionally. In arriving at an amount for mental anguish, the Court heard direct testimony flum not only Harris Leveson but also Christine Jernigan. The Court also observed the demession of Harris Leveson during his testimony. The Court observed that he appeared to be a besten and broken man. He has endured and continues to endure a range of emotions, including devastation, anger, stress, curbanasament and grief, all resulting from the actions of the Defendants. Defendants presented no dredible avidence suggesting that the Pisioniffs slid not suffer mental angulah and stress from its wrongital conduct.

On July 15, 2005, a few weeks prior to trial, the Bank released the colleteral on two of the percels of land. Larry Pitchford testified at trial that the Bank is ready to extend the fixed rate as represented by Potthoff.

Plaintiffs presented the Court with a chart that noted numerous inconsistencies between Jerry Guiledge's deposition testimony and the taped conversations. Defendents have not disputed those inconsistencies. Jerry Chilledge's deposition testimony is remarkably different from his taped conversations. The Court canoludes that Jerry Gulledge missed characterized his rintements during his deposition but that he was truthful in his testimony at trial. The Court also concludes that Defendant Larry Pitchford lacked versoity and credibility in much of his testimeny.

Jerry Guliedge acknowledged at trial that there was inconsistenties between his deposition testimony and the transcripts of the taped conversations. He admitted at trial tailing Leveson that "If you want to play bard hall, we can play hard ball, I can give you until the and of the month to come pay that note off or we'll foreclose on it." He also admitted talling Levesor that "It's time to dance or go home." Guiledge is now employed at Southland Bank, where he has gained invaluable experience in the banking industry. Guiledge apologized at trial for his threats and the insensistencies, contending that anything he did or said was at the direction of Bank President Larry Pitchford or Chief Executive Officer Rickey Stuckey.

Gulledge admitted that Peoples Community Bank mishandled Pinintiffs' loans, funds and bank account. He admitted that the Bank negligently and wantonly hired Kevin Potthoff and negligently and wantonly supervised and retained Kevin Porthoff. He admitted that the 10/20/05 13:41 FAX 770 845 0400

Hank had no right to withdraw money from Harris Leveson's account. He admitted that there were improprieties with regard to Plaintiffs' loans. He also testified that besed on what he now knows, he believes that everything in Plaintiffs' complaint is true.

Constraint of Lave

In a nonjury trial, the role of the judge is to interpret the law, determine the faces and apply the faces to the law for an eventual decision of the controversy. Ex mate City of Jacksonville, 693 So.2d 465 (Als. 1996). It is within the province of the trial court when esting as fact finder to weigh conflicting testimony, determine credibility and resolve conflicts in the evidence. Id. The Court is from to choose to believe all, part, or none of the evidence presented.

Negligence and Wantonness

Plaintiffs claim that all of the Defendants were negligent and wanton (1) in their dealings with Plaintiffs and in their handling and servicing of Plaintiffs loans, funds and bank accounts; (2) in its employee's notationistic of Plaintiff Harris Leveson's signature without speaking with him or witnessing his algorithm; (3) in hiring Kevin Potthoff and Jeny Guiledge; and (4) in failing to adequately train, monitor and/or supervise its employees.

Negligence is the failure to use reasonable care to prevent have to oneself or others. A person's conduct is negligent when he either does something that a reasonably product person would not do in a similar situation, or ialls to do something that a reasonably product person would have done in a similar situation.

Wantonness is the conscious doing of some act or omission of some duty under knowledge of existing conditions and conscious that from the doing of such act or emission of such duty an injury will likely or probably result. Before a party can be said to be guilty of wanton conduct it must be shown that with reckless indifference to the consequences he either consciously and intentionally did some wrongful act or consciously amitted some known duty which produced the injury. Machen v. Childensburg Banconposition. Inc., 761 So.2d 981 (Ala. 1999); Ala. Code, 1975 § 6-11-20(b)(3). When an employee commits wantonness within the line and scope of his employment, his employer is also liable for such wantonness regardless of the employer's lack of actual participation in such wantonness of his employee.

The Court concludes that all of the Defendants were negligent and wanted in their dealings with Plaintiffs and in their handling and surviving of Plaintiffs loans, funds and bank accounts; in the Bank compleyer's pointantion of Plaintiff Harris Leveson's signature without speaking with him or witnessing his alguature; in hiding Kevin Pothoff and Jerry Guiledge; and in failing to adequately train, monitor and/or supervise its employees.

(1) Handling and Servicing of Plaintiffs' Louis, Funds and Bank Accounts

The Court concludes that all of the Defendants were negligent and wanton in their dealings with Plaintiffs and in their handling and servicing of Plaintiffs' loans, funds and bank accounts. The Court concludes that the arridence in this case more than sufficiently supports this conclusion. Defendant Jerry Chiledge admitted that the Bank mishandled Plaintiffs' loans, funds and bank account. Defendant Jerry Guiledge also admitted that there were improprieties with regard to Plaintiffs' loans.

(3) Bank Employee Violates Duty as Notary Public

The Court concludes that the Bank, by and through its employee Lisa Bell seting within the line and scope of her employment, negligently and wantonly violated her duties as a notary public by falling to speak to Plaintiff Harris Leveson and witness his signatures upon two mortgages.

A notary public owes a duty to not homenly, skillfully and with reasonable diligence. First Bank of Childenburg v. Blancy, 676 So.1d 324, 331 (Aia. 1996). This duty imposed on a notary public requires the notary to ascertain the identity of the person whose signature he or she sitests. Therefore, this duty cannot be faifilled unless the transaction is done by or before the notary. For those reasons, the duty of the notary public requires that he or she not certify that a person has acknowledged the execution of a mortgage when the person did not suknowledge the execution before the notary. 676 So.2d at 332. If a notary public does not witness the algorithms of the mortgager, is not in the plane where the mortgager signs the mortgage, and does not see or speak to the mortgager when he signs the mortgage, and the mortgager does not see or speak to the mortgager when he signs the mortgage, the notary's act of signifig her name and affixing her notarial scal to the mortgage is a violation of her legal duty. Sason v. Hynon. 781 So.2d 238 (Aia. Civ. App. 2000).

Lisa Bell, while setting within the line and scope of her employment with the Bank, signed her name and affixed her notatial seal to two mortgages obligating Plaintiffs to the Bank. Lisa Bell owed a duty to Plaintiffs to witness the signatures of Harris Leveson upon and mortgages and to have Flaris Leveson selectowiedge the execution of the mortgages before her. Bell feiled to keep a register book for her notarial acknowledgments as required by law. While Bell testified that she did not remember being present at the Leveson closing, the did admit that she did not know if Leveson algored the mortgage selectowiedgments. She also admitted that she could have notarized the documents without witnessing Leveson's execution of the documents. Both Leveson and Jernigan testified that there was no notary in the room during the time that the documents were executed. The Court finds that at the mortgage closing Lies Bell did not see Harris Leveson, she did not speak to Harris Leveson and she did not witness Matris Leveson's tignatures on the mortgages.

Defendants contended that Heli's failure to comply with her notarial duties did not proximately cause the Plaintiffs' damages. The Court concludes otherwise. Plaintiffs presented sufficient evidence that because of the difference in the terms of the mortgages which Laveson actually signed and those which were improperly notarized by Lica Bell, Plaintiffs were forced to make higher payments at higher interest rates. The discrepancies also caused Harris Loveson to inour enormous mental angulah. The Court concludes that two conflicting sets of loan documents are inexcurable, and that Plaintiffs were damaged as a result.

(3) Negligent/Wanton Hiring

Plaintiffs further claimed that the Bank regilgently and wantonly hired Kevin Potthoff and Jerry Gulledge. The tort of negligent inling is separate and distinct from the torts of negligent supervision and negligent retention. Alabama has long recognized a cause of section for negligent hiring. Under Alabama law, an employer may be held liable for injuries to a third party which is the result of the unfitness or incompetence of the employee. Lane v. Central Bank of Alabama, N.A., 425 So.2d 1098 (Ala. 1983); Big B. Inc. v. Centralment. 634 So.2d 999 (1993), abrogated on other grounds, Horton Homes, Inc. v. Brooks, 832 So.2d 44, 57 (Ala. 2001). The employer is negligent in hiring such an employee when the employer knew or should have known of the employer's incompetence or unfitness.

The Bank had been told by Kevin Potthoff's former employer that if Potthoff was going to work in a lending capacity that he would have to be closely supervised. The Bank hired Potthoff as its branch manager than delegated the entire responsibility of lending at that branch to Potthoff while failing to provide any supervision over him. Also Defendant Jerry Guliedge admitted that the Bank negligently and wantedly hired Kavin Potthoff.

40.8040 b. 11 Moreca b. 11 Motor

There was also sufficient evidence that the Hank negligently and wantonly hired Jerry Gulledge, Gulledge had no previous banking experience. After Posthoff a termination, the Bank put Gulledge in the position of branch manager.

The Bank knew of Porthoff's and Gulledge's incompetence and unfilmess yet kired them as branch managers of the Bank. The Court concludes that the Bank negligently and wantonly hired Kevin Porthoff and Jary Gulledge.

(4) Negligent/Wanton Supervision and Retention

Even if this Court had not concluded that Potthoff and Gulledge were negligarily and wantonly hired, this Court would nonetheless conclude that the Bank negligarily and wantonly supervised and retained Kevin Putthoff and Jerry Gulledge. The facts surrounding Kevin Potthoff's tenure as branch manager conclusively proves that the Bank knew exactly what they were getting when they hired Potthoff's Potthoff's mishandling of his own personal finances clearly indicated that he could not be trusted to handle the finances of others. The Bank was on notice that:

- Positioff was misrepresenting interest news and colleteral of loans;
- · Potthoff was check kiling:
- Potthoff was late in making payments on his personal loan;
- Potthoff was writing entitler's checks to his wife in order to quickly obtain funds;
- Potiboff was issuing loans which had turns different from the terms approved by the Bank's loan committee;
- Potthoff wrote an unsecured loan allegedly for his housekeeper;
- Postboff opened up an account in his wife's name from which he constantly cycled monies even though he was not on the account's signature card;
- · Potthoff had been constantly overdrawn on his personal account at the Bank; and,
- Pothoff, without authorization, withdraw monies from his wife's law firm's account and deposited them into his account.

The Bank's President Larry Pitchford and the Bank's Chief Executive Officer Rickey Stuckey had actual motion of these impropriation, yet the Bank continued to employ Kevin Potthoff. The Court concludes that the Bank knowingly placed Kevin Potthoff in a position to injure the Plaintiffs. The Bank chose to know the questionable activities of Kevin Potthoff because Potthoff was what the Bank winted - a moneymaking loan officer. In just six months during 2003, Kevin Potthoff wrote more than $5 million in leans, greatly exceeding other Alabama landers. The Bank slouply did not want to lose its leading lander. Finally, Jerry Gulledge admitted that the Bank and Larry Pitchford negligently and wantenly supervised and retained Kevin Potthoff.

·Frand/Suppression

Pishutiffs Harris Laveson and Harris Post & Termite Control say that they were harmed by false statements intentionally, mistakenly and/or recklessly made by Defendants. Plaintiffs say the felse statements were: (1) that Defendants would finance two loans at certain rates, terms and conditions; (2) that the collateral for these loans would be two parcels of property; (3) that the loan in the amount of $15,559.50 would be increased to $25,000; and, (4) that Defendants would renumbly, properly and in good faith handle, mulntain, overses and/or otherwise account for Plaintiffs' loans, funds and bank account. Plaintiffs also say that they were harmed because Defendants hid or withheld important facts from them. Plaintiffs also say that Defendants suppressed material facts concerning their loans, finds and bank accounts.

A faise sintement may be moken, written or other conduct. To resover damages on this claim, Plaintiffs must establish: (1) that Defendants intentionally, mistakenly and/or recklessly stated to Plaintiffs that a present or past important fact was true; (2) that Defendants' statements were false; (3) that Defendants knew that the statements were false when they made them and Plaintiffs did not know such sigtements were false; (4) that Defendants intended that Plaintiffs rely on those statements; (5) that Plaintiffs relied on the statements; and (6) that Plaintiffs asted and were harmed. Oaborn v. Custom Truck Salva & Service. Div. of Alley-Consetty Coal. Inc., 562 Sp.2d 243 (Als. 1990). To prove their suppression claim, Plaintiffs must show that Defendants hid or withheld an important fact from Plaintiffs; that Plaintiffs did not know of the important fact; that Plaintiffs acted and Was harmed. Hall Motor Co. v. Furmen, 28! Als. 499, 234 Sc.2d 37 (1970).

Kevin Pottpoff consistently represented to Pisintiffs that the Bank would finance a $240,000 loan with a 3.99% fixed rate for 15 years with no belloon and no acceleration clause, that the monthly payment would be approximately $1,700 a month and that the collateral would be two parcels of property. These representations were false. The collateral was four parcels of land instead of two. The interest rate for the large loss was 5.5% instead of 3.99%. The monthly payments were $2,098 instead of $1,723. The loan documents specified a balloon payment and contained an acceleration clause. Plaintiffs relied on those representations to their detriment and they were demand as a result of the false statements.

Having established that Defandants are guilty of flaud, then the Plaintiffs are entitled to recover for such actual damages that they suffered. In addition to actual damages, publicly demages are available in a fraud action where the plaintiff proves by clear and convincing evidence that the wrotedoer's conduct is envicious, oppossive, or gross, and that the miscopresentation that is the basis of the fraud is made with the knowledge of faisity and with the purpose of injuring the party. Ala, Code, 1975 $ 6-11-20.

Because the Court has concluded that Plaintiffs have prevailed on their first two fraud claims, it is unnecessary for the Court to reach plaintiffs' remaining two flesh claims and their suppression claims.

*Breach of Contract

Flaintiffs contend that the Bank breached contracts and/or seresments with them. A contract is breached or broken when a party does not do what it premised to do in the contract. To recover damages from Defendant for breach of contract. Plaintiffs must move: (1) that Plaintiffs and Defendant entered into a contract; (2) that Plaintiffs did all of the things that the contract required them to do: (3) that Defendant failed to do the things that the contract required it to do; and (4) that Plaintiffs were beened by that failure. Volkswaren of America, Inc. v. Dillard, 579 So.2d 1201, 1303 (Air. 1991). Plaintiffs are antitled to that sum which would place them in the same condition they would have occupied if the contract had not been breached. Boyette v. Oakes, 518 Sp.2d 37 (Als. 1987).

Mental angulah damages may be gwerded in certain cases for breach of contract, provided that "the subject matter of the contract is so closely associated with matters of mental concern, or with the emotions of the resty to whom the duty is owed, that a breach of that duty can resecrably be expected to result in mantal angular or suffering." B. & M. Homes, Inc. v. Hogan, 376 Sc.2d 667, 671 (Alb. 1979)

The Court concludes that the Buck quite clearly breached the contracts and saresments with Plaintiffs.

Pigintiffs entered into an agreement with the Bank when they opened their assumt. This legal oddinact between Plaintiffs and the Bank sets forth what Plaintiffs and the Bank both can and must do regarding deposits and withdrawals from the account. a duty to properly handle its depositors' account transactions. Remolds v. Maleyan, 416 So.2d 702 (Aia. 1982). Where, as in this case, a depositor lastes checks on his or her bank and those checks are properly presented for payment, yet are wrongfully reduced or dishonored by the bank, a depositor may then maintain a cause of action for breach of contract and other duties arising out of the bank's wrongful dishonor. First Alabama Bank of South Baldwin v. Prudendal Life Insurance Cas. of America. 619 So.2d 1313 (Aia. 1993); First National Bank v. Ducros. 27 Aia. App. 193, 168 So. 704 (1936). Plaintiffs, as customers and depositors of Dafendant Bank, gave express instructions to the Bank regarding deposits and were given receipts avidencing them deposits. Numerous checks were issued in reliance that those deposits had been made. Yet the Bank wrongfully refused to properly honor those checks, causing Plaintiffs to inour various costs and from the to insufficient flunds in Plaintiffs' account, as well as causing Plaintiff. Harris Levason extreme embarrassment and humiliation. The Bank also removed funds from Plaintiffs' account without authorization.

Plaintiffs also extered into a Loan Modification Agreement with the Bank. The Bank also breached that agreement with Plaintiffs.

Ordinarily punitive damages are not recoverable for breach of contract. Conton v. Universal Door Systems, Inc., 596 So.2d 565, 572 (Ala, 1991). However, punitive damages have been allowed where fraud or duress was coupled with breach of a contract. See House v. Riversida Chavrolet Olds. Inc., 655 So.2d 909 (Ala, 1994); Hobson v. American Castifran Pins Co., 690 So.2d 341, 344 (Ala, 1997).

Breach of Fiduciary Duties

Plaintiffs also claim that the Defendants breached fiduciary duties owed to the Plaintiffs. A fiduciary obligation exists whenever one person—the client—places special trust and confidence in another person—the fiduciary—relying upon the fiduciary to exercise discretion or expertise in acting for the client. The fiduciary knowingly accepts that trust and confidence and thereafter undertakes to act in hebalfoffic client by exercising the fiduciary's own discretion and expertise. The Court recognizes that the mere fact that a business relationship comes into being between two persons does not mean that either owes a fiduciary obligation to the other. If one person engages or employs another and thereafter directs or supervises or approves the other's actions, the person so employed is not a fiduciary. It is only when one perty reposes, and the other accepts, a special trust and confidence, usually involving the exercise of professional expertise and discretion that a fiduciary relationship comes into being.

When one person does undertake to set for enother in a fiduciary relationship, the law forbids the fiduciary from acting in any manner solverse or contrary to the interests of the client, or from acting for the fiduciary's own benefit in relation to the subject matter of their relationship. The client is entitled to the best silbert of the fiduciary on the client's behalf, and the fiduciary must exercise skill, care and diligence when acting on behalf of the client. A person setting in a fiduciary capacity is required to make trainful and complete disclosures to those to whom a fiduciary obligation is owed, and the fiduciary is forbidden to obtain an unressurable advantage at the client's expense. Army Aviation Center Federal Credit Union v. Johnson, 716 So.2d 1250 (Ale. Civ. App. 1998); AmSouth Bank v. Spigener, 505 So.2d 1030 (All 1986).

Kevin Potthoff inspired the confidence of Leveson that he would not in good faith for Leveson's interest. Harris Leveson imposed a great deal of trust in Potthoff and followed his financial recommendations regarding his losse and accounts. Unquestionably, Kevin Putthoff was in a position to exercise dominion over Plaintiffs' account, and the dominion that he exercised ultimately damaged the Plaintiffs. Under these facts, Kevin Potthoff and his employer owed fiduciary obligations to Plaintiffs which they breached. The Bank expressly assumed certain duties to Plaintiffs that the Bank breached. In breaching these fiduciary duties, the Bank acted knowingly, deliberately and/or recklessly and placed its own profit, objectives and success ahead of and to the detriment of the profit, success and objectives of Plaintiffs.

The Benk and the Flaintiffs had a fiduciary relationship which resulted in the attendant duty of the Bank to exercise utmost ears, candor, loyalty and good faith in its dealings with Plaintiffs. Based upon the evidence presented in this case, the Court finds that the Bank breached that duty in this case.

Conversion

The Court size concludes that the Bank converted monies from Plaintiffs' account. To constitute conversion, there must be a wrongful taking or a wrongful detantion or interference, or an illegal assumption of ownership, or an illegal use or minuse. On v. Por. 362 So.2d 835 (Als. 1978). Damages for conversion are measured by the value of the property as of the date of the conversion plus interest at the rate of 694 per annum from the date of the conversion. Charter Hospital of Mobile, Inc. v. Weinberg, 558 So.2d 909, 912 (Ala. 1990). Funitive demages are recoverable for conversion when such conversion was willful or was committed under circumstances of insult or malice. Lyons v. Williams, 567 So.2d 1280 (Ale. 1990). It is sufficient if the proof shows that the conversion was attended by rudeness, wantonness, recidessness or insuffing manner or accompanied by chromatanecs of fraud, oppression, aggregation or gross northwance. Empire Gas. Inc. v. Cartwelchi, 595 50.2d 1348 (Ala. 1992).

The Bank converted to its own use comin finds to which Plaintiffs were entitled. Kevin Potthoff caused Pielutiffs to incur substantial NSF fees as a result of his mishandlings of their account. He also had been instructed by Plaintiffs to transfer funds into the account from their line of credit. Pursuant to his sutherily so branch manager and the instructions be received from Plaintiffs, Potthoff deposited $5,650 into Plaintiffs' account on October 24, 2003. Potthoff provided Plaintiffs with requires of these deposits. The Bank abruptly withdraw these monies from Plaintiffs' account on Movember 7, 2003. Jerry Guiledge admitted that the Hank had no right to withdraw money from Harris Leveson's account. This withdrawal without notice to Plaintiff caused them considerable beam. At the time of this wrongful taking, these funds belonged to the Plaintiffs and were clearly identifiable. Chisens Bank of Moultain v. Jones, 671 So.2d 737 (Ale. Civ. App., 1995). This Court complides that the $5,650 which Revitt Potthoff deposited into Plaintiffs' account was rightfully owed to the Pinintiffs and should not have been withdrawn by the Bank. There were other appropriate avenues available to the Benic to deal with Potthoff's interference with other customers' accounts. Taking the Pisintiffs' muney was not one of them.

-Outrage

Plaintiffs also claimed that the actions of the Defendants were extreme and outrepouts and were done intentionally or recklessly causing severe emotional distress to Plaintiffs. In order to make out a case of contrageous condust. Plaintiffs are required to show extreme and outrepeous conduct that is intentional or resides and causes severe emotional distress or bodily harm. Goodwin v. Barry Miller Champiet, Inc., $43 So. 2d 1171, 1174 (Ala. 1989). The test consists of fully basic elements: (1) that the Defendant knew or should have known that its conduct was likely to result in emptional outrage; (2) that the conduct was extreme and outrageous; (3) that the Defendant's actions were the cause of the Plaintiff's distress; and (4) that the emotional distress suffered by the Plaintiff was "severe." U.S.A. Gil. Inc. v. Smith, 415 So. 2d 1098, 1100 (Ala. Civ. App.), pert, denied mb nam. Ex patts Smith, 415 So. 2d 1102 (1982). The Defendant's conduct must be "so outrageous in character and so extreme in degree as to go beyond all possible bounds of decency, and to be regarded as atropious and utterly intolerable in civilized society." American Road Service Co. v. Iomon. 394 Sp. 24 361, 365 (Ala. 1981).

While it has been recognized that a Plaintiff's burden of proving outrage is a leavy one, it has also recognized that this burden is not impossible to meet. Surrency v. Harbison. 489 So. 2d 1097, 1103 (Als. 1986). In order to establish outrageous conduct by a corporate 10/20/05 13:43 FAX 770 849 0400

Defendant, it must be shown that the conduct "was perpetrated as a means to further the Defendant corporation's business," or that a jury could conclude that "this is the way the company does business." Business. Truswal Systems Corp., $51 So. 2d 322, 327 (Ala. 1989).

The Court concludes that this case is the epitome of the claim of outrage. The evidence presents a power using its force to coldly abuse one of less significance with absolute knowledge of the consequences. Harris Leveson was absolutely helpless when he attempted to straighten out the mess which had been emised by Kovin Potthoff. Instead of being treated apologetically or respectfully, Levison was met with absolute crucity. He was sent two foreclosure notices even though he was not even late on his loan payments. The Bank abruptly removed $5,630 from his business account without notice, knowing that overdrafts would occur, and then threatened him regarding the resulting overdrafts. And at the time that the State President and branch manager summoned Harris Leveson to tall him that they expected Leveson to pay off the overdrafts, that the Bank could call all his loans and foreclose on all four parcels of property - including his home - the Bank had already written off the overdrafts. The Defendants had every intention of pressuring Harris Leveson into silently paying the Bank more money.

·Compensatory Damages

The Court, having found in favor of the Plaintiffs on the above claims, assesses Plaintiffs' compensatory damages at Two Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($2,500,000).

The actual damages includes $9,725 for insufficient fund and overdust feet, $9,552 in overpayments on loans, $7,370 for additional office expenses, $5,650 representing the amount converted from Plaintiffs' account, $216,000 representing lost customers, $165,000 representing the lost value of work as a cotton arout, $42,000 representing Jennigen's time working on the bank errors and $211,000 representing the payoff of the void mortgage.

In addition the Plaintiff had $2 different checks returned after being presented for payment. Many of these checks were presented for payment more than once. Each returned check compounded the damage to the Plaintiff.

The Court recognizes that the Bank released two of the parcels shortly before trial and offered at trial to correct Plaintiffs' interest rate on the mortgage to 3.99% as promised by Punitoff. The Court has taken these facts into consideration in antiving at its award.

·Punitive Demages

A principal can be held responsible for an act of his agent, which was committed beyond the scope of the agent's suthority by subsequently ratifying such act. Ratification by the principal of an act of his agent requires an intent on the part of the principal to ratify such act. This intention may be express or implied, and may be inferred where there is avidence intending to show that the principal, with adequate knowledge of the facts and chromataness, so conducted himself as to indicate his purpose to confirm or adopt the thauthorized act of his agent. The Court concludes based on the unidence presented that the Bank authorized and ratified the conduct of its employees, including Kevin Potthoff, Larry Pitchford, Jerry Guiledge and Lisa Bell.

In order for the Plaintiffs to recover putitive damages they must prove by clear and convincing evidence that the Bank consciously or deliberately engaged in oppression, fixed, wantanness or malice with regard to the Plaintiffs. AutoZone. Inc. v. Lannard. 812 So.2d 1179 (Ala. 2001). Oppression is the subjecting of a person to crust and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of that person's rights. CroAgrs. Inc. v. Turner. 776 So.2d 792 (Ala. 2000).

The record in this case is replete with substantial evidence which is clear and convincing to the Court sitting as the trier of facts in this matter that the following took place:

- Instead of soknowledging that its loan documents demonstrated fraud and insufficient acknowledgments, the Bank menacingly sought to forsolose;
- Instead of giving their customer the benefit of the doubt regarding his dealings with a menager whom the Bank knew to be dishonest, the Bank insisted that Leveson provide them with "written proof" of his claims:
- There was testimony that certain bank documents should have existed but none could be found and no credible explanation was given for their absence;
- Instead of simply putting Leveson's loans and account in the state in which they should have been, the Bank put Hattle Leveson on the verge of financial rule;
- Defendants utilized pressure, loverage, threats and other coercive measures to force payment of losgs; and,

The Court concludes that the evidence in this case more than sufficiently supports the inference that the Defendants' conduct warrant the imposition of punitive damages. The Court, having found in favor of the Plaintiffs on the above claims, assesses the Plaintiffs' punitive damages at One Million Dollars ($1,000,000). 10/20/05 13:44 FAL //U 849 U400 WELL COMFANIES 0/20/2005 09:02 FAL 2052618929 LYE OCT, 10.2005 0012 55000 FFM85 ATTYS DOTHER AL
